

Research and Publication Colloquium

Challenges in post-industrial labour markets

In the context of post-industrial labour markets, we witness manifold challenges and developments. Be it in terms of new risk structures, adverse outcomes or changing institutional settings. In this colloquium we would like to gather scholars interested in labour markets and their interrelation with society to discuss their research and provide a platform to get feedback on their work-in progress.

Whilst thematically the colloquium will be centred on the issue of labour market and society, the aim is to address scholars from various disciplines, who work on these questions from a variety of different angles.

Topics of interest could include among other questions linked to:

- New forms of social inequality and compensation demands resulting from changing labour market structures. What strategies do governments apply to re-insert long-term unemployed, immigrants, or individuals with obsolete skills into an increasingly competitive labour market? What kind of outcomes do these policies have on different groups?
- The consequences of competitive labour markets on the appointing strategy of companies. What kind of strategies do employers apply when choosing their collaborators and what kind of discriminatory patterns may arise as a consequence?
- Developments of institutions and policy schemes in the labour market domain. How do countries adapt to external and internal pressures? And what are the consequences of flexibilising and activating welfare reforms?

Schedule autumn 2016

Date	Authors	Paper title	Discussant	Geopolis* 5 th floor
27. September	Emily Murphy , and Helen Buchs Jacobs Center, Uni Zurich	"Access to jobs among the unemployed: How does education under varying labour demand affect immigrant and natives' search duration?"	Anna Wilson	GEO-5799
11. October	José Mata , HEC, Unil	"Immigrant entrepreneurship"	Lionel Cottier	GEO-5799
8. November	Lionel Cottier , Unil	"Culture and retirement in Switzerland"	Giuliano Bonoli	GEO-5799
22. November	Flavia Fossati and Philipp Trein , Unil	"Who benefits from short-time work? The effect of labour market policy on electoral behaviour "	Rafael Lalive	GEO-5899
6. December	Giuliano Bonoli and Anna Wilson , IDHEAP, Unil	Inclusion policies in dual VET systems: a comparative study	Philipp Trein	GEO-5899
20. December	Elena Maria Canadas Espinosa , HEC, Unil	"The influence of gender-emotion stereotypes on hiring decisions"	Flavia Fossati	GEO-5799

*to reach Geopolis by public transport: Metro M1, stop "Unil-Mouline".

Organisation:

The colloquium entails a presentation of the paper for max. 20', then max. 10' comments by a discussant and 30' general discussion.

The paper to be discussed will be circulated 7 days in advance, to give the discussant and the participants enough time to prepare their comments.

The colloquium will be held ca. all 3 weeks on Tuesdays from 12.15-13.15. We provide sandwiches for the participants.

If you are interested to attend the colloquium and thus getting the papers in advance, please register sending an email to flavia.fossati@unil.ch.

If you want to present your work-in progress next semester (spring 2017), please contact flavia.fossati@unil.ch and refer to our homepage: www.unil.ch/idheap/LMC